Speech of Gov. Vance, of N. C.
The following is the address of Ex-Governor Vance, of N. C. to the Northern excursion party, who lately visited the State of North Carolina.

Gentlemen of the Northern Press: When I say to you, that I am happy to welcome you all here to-day, I do not use the mere forms of courtesy, but speak the words of sincerity and truth. It is a happy idea that has suggested this trip. It is said in Scripture, when the question was asked, can any thing good come out of Nazareth? Philip said, "Come and see."

It is a happy thing for us that this corps of the conductors of the public press, the fourth estate of the realm, acknowledged in times of civilization and liberty to possess greater powers for good or evil than any other institution in the land, shall see for themselves and report accurately to their thousands of readers what they saw and heard in North Carolina. This occasion is also one of greater importance, for the reason that it is the first time since the war that we have received a visit of courtesy and friendship from the people of the North. It is what the newspapers say of Vallandigham's platform, a "new departure."

Heretofore, we have been visited only by armed soldiers. This kind and courteous appeal to our better feelings will not be without its fruits. We appreciate it highly, and it will have greater influence in reconciling the country than all the armies and all the pains and penalties which can be imposed upon us. If we were not more susceptible to kindness and conciliation than to force, we would not be worthy of the name of freemen. North Carolina has been singled out for criticism, for what reason Heaven only knows, in an especial manner, within the last twelve months. She has always heretofore been considered one of the most orderly and law abiding of all the Southern States. The misfortune is that the exigencies of party politics have rendered it necessary that we should wash our dirty linen in public.

From the pulpit, the press, the bench—from the stump and the Executive has gone forth exaggerated accounts of every offence committed against the law in the State, and each of them has been attributed to partisan purposes. From these sources the impression has gone forth that we are a band of lawless barbarians. Where are the communities where there are no violations of law? It is certainly not New York, nor Pennsylvania, nor New Jersey. It is not in America.

There may be communities where the civil and political rights of all citizens are undisturbed; there doubtless will be a time when halcyon peace will brood over the whole land; but it will be none to molest or make afraid; but it will not be before the millennial trumpet sounds. Now, sirs, a man cannot go out and rob his neighbor's henroost in peace, or maul his enemy in old-fashioned style without being accused of a design to violate the integrity of the Republic. It is referred to at once as a desire to raise another rebellion. Why, gentlemen, the very idea of another rebellion by a people who have been so completely subjugated, is absurd. It is true we have some disorders among us—no reasonable man will pretend to deny it; nor would any reasonable man expect anything else. I challenge the History of the World to show where a people who have endured the horrors of a terrible civil war, for four long years, whose political, social and moral condition had been so completely upturned, whose wealth had been so completely destroyed, whose sons had been so completely slaughtered, whose every feeling, sentiment and prejudice had been so trampled on, have submitted to it all with so much quiet and so little of disorder. If you expect us to exhibit more obedience and patience than we have, I am sure you pay us a compliment, which perhaps you do not intend, for it attributes to us the possession of virtues which I know you would not look for in your own people.

Again I repeat we are most happy to see you here to learn of these things for yourselves, and not another. I am only sorry that you cannot go farther and be more complete and accurate. Of course, when we are preparing to entertain visitors, we put our best foot foremost, and our households are swept and garnished; but there is nothing among us that we would not desire you to see.

A gentleman who preceded me assured you that the best wine had been kept for the last of the feast, in alluding to his reception here. I beg to assure him that you are only entering into the edge of the wine district, and that the farther you go in North Carolina the better.

Greensboro' is an ambitious little city, and does very well considering all things; but if you will go with me ninety-five miles southwest of this to the city of Charlotte, which place my colleagues and myself are authorized to invite you, in the county of Mecklenburg, we will show you the natal spot of American liberty and Independence. If you desire it in full force for your entertainment, headed by the Grand Cyclops himself. (Laughter.) I can say for myself, and I believe for all the people of North Carolina, with sincerity and truth, that we desire, pray for, agonize for, not reconstruction only, but reconciliation with the people of the North.

You must remember that we claim as great a part in the past glories of the Republic as belong to you. Remember that the people of North Carolina stood side by side with those of Massachusetts and New York in the "times which tried men's souls." Remember that our soil is covered with the battle fields of that great revolution, and its bosom is filled with the dust of as many heroes and as noble, who perished in that struggle, as ever gave their blood to the cause of Liberty.

There is no reason why, if you would give us a chance, we should not strive for the honor and glory of the country as well as you. It is only needs that we be truly reconciled. It is not well for a people to continue strife after the contest is ended. It is not well for one side to cherish exclusively traditions that would fill the ether with rage or sorrow. You have your heroes of the great civil war in whose praises we cannot cordially join; we have our heroes whose glories you cannot sing, but there are common duties and common heroes who belong to the whole American people in whose praises we can all unite. Let us cherish these and meet on this common ground.

I propose to you this day in the name of the people of North Carolina to assist in inaugurating a state of affairs that shall lead to the complete reconciliation and reunion of our lately disunited and unhappy country. I propose to you that we should imitate what is said to happen to the old, old man approaching almost to the grave, who, forgetting the things of yesterday, sees again in all their vividness and sunshine the sweet joys and scenes of his boyhood, when, as a boy, his own and his little brother's feet pattered side by side through all the paths of youth up to mature manhood, when their noblest and most substantial victories were won. As to the bitter memories that divide us, let us bury them in the grave forever, ay, forever.

The symptoms of Liver Complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side, sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels are generally constipated, sometimes alternating with laxity.
